Tjardia van Starckenborgh-Stachouwer, attaché of the Netherlands legation in this city, took place last evening, at 6 o'clock, at Old St. Paul's Church, in Baltimore.

Palms banked the body of the church and the altar was brilliant with candles and decorated with palms, white lilies and white chrysanthemums. Palms and chrysanthemums were also used in the decoration of the choir.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Arthur E. Kinsolving, rector of the church, the guests including in addition to the Baltimore contingent, members of the diplomatic corps from Washington and a number of others from out of town.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful gown of rose point lace over ivory satin, the court train of the rose point being caught with sprays of orange blossoms. Her tulle veil was arranged with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Eugene Hannan, pastor of St. Martin's Church, in the parlor, which was effectively decorated with white roses, white chrysanthemums, palms and autumn leaves.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a smart tailored suit of dove gray broadcloth, with hat to match, and carried a shower of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Sarah Farr was her sister's only attendant. She wore a gown of wistaria tulle, and carried a bouquet of lavender chrysanthemums.

Little Miss Constance Morgan, the bride's niece, was the flower girl, and she wore a lovely dress of white lace with a girle of pale blue satin, and carried a gold basket filled with white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Frank Sabotka, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

An orchestra played the wedding music and during the supper which followed.

Why We Should Not Delay Returning Merchandise We Cannot Use

By keeping such goods in our homes we oblige merchants to carry larger stocks than necessary.

Remember, there are always a great many others who are holding goods as we are.

Business cannot be maintained with depleted assortments.

And so we compel merchants to buy more goods than they actually require.

This unnecessary tie-up of capital reduces profits. And that, in turn, necessitates a rise in prices.

Plainly, it is to our own interests to avoid in every way unnecessary "approval" buying and needless holding of such goods in our homes.
